

Evgeny N. Pashentsev. The “Ukraine” Strategic Provocation. – Moscow: International Centre for Socio-Political Studies and Consulting with the academic support of the Philosophy of the Language and Communication Chair at the Philosophy Faculty of the Lomonosov Moscow State University, the CEEISA Permanent Section “Communication Management in World Politics and Business”, International Expert Network EURUCMNET, 2014. – 144 pp.

The main idea of an international provocation is to trap the opponent in the tight corner and make him react in certain way which means losing the positions, tangible and intangible assets. History witnessed a lot of international acts of provocation with serious consequences. Quite a number of them are made in the USA. The recent one is taking place in the Ukraine at the moment having at the same time global impact. The author analyzes the aims and methods of the provocation pointing to its synchronization on the global scale – from anti-government demonstrations in Venezuela to terrorist attacks in China.

The book can be useful for a wide number of readers interested in geopolitics and international relations.

Please send your letters and comments to the editors at: icspsc@mail.ru

Evgeny N. Pashentsev is a DSc and professor at the Philosophy of the Language and Communication Chair at the Philosophy Faculty of the Lomonosov Moscow State University. He is also a director at the International Centre for Socio-Political Studies and Consulting (ICSPSC) and the author of twelve monographs on the genesis of military regimes, communication management and strategic communication.

Prof. Pashentsev is a member of the advisory board at Comunicar Journal (Spain), coordinator of the international research and expert network on the communication and media management of the EU and Russia relations (EURUCMNET). Honorary Research Fellow at Birmingham University (October – November 2005). Partner of the European Association for Viewers’ Interests. Member of the Central and East European International Studies Association (CEEISA). Editor of the ICSPSC monographs’ series “Communication management in modern politics and business”.